Presents....

Musicians from all over Melbourne are gathering up their old CDs, clothes, books, instruments, bikes and anything else they can lay their hands on to auction at Bar 303 High St, Northcote on Sunday 17th April at 3pm. There will be trivia, games, music and comedy including that perenial favourite “Underpants of Fire” to entertain everyone as well as the auctions.

Letterbox Music is behind the fundraising initiative to give Melbourne musos the opportunity to attend the 2011 National Folk Festival in Canberra this Easter.

“The National Folk Festival is a great way for budding musos from all the around Australia to get a spot on a blackboard open mic and play to hundreds of people, and possibly get talent spotted to be on the line up for the next year. The Festival is not just about Folk music, you see all kinds of music up in Canberra, and it’s a great way to network too, if you’re keen to organise gigs in other states,” says Letterbox Music director, Vic Farrell.

Letterbox Music is the brainchild of singersongwriter Vic Farrell to assist musicians get started in Australia. Organising gigs, fundraisers, performance art events and other projects such as CD recordings, Letterbox Music is about establishing a collective of musicians to help each other out.

Any musician can participate, play, donate, help out and come along to the festival with us.
